By Editorial Staff

Advertising Disclosure

CPM (Cost Per Mille) is a digital advertising pricing model where publishers and bloggers earn money for every 1,000 ad impressions served, regardless of whether users click the ad or not. Unlike CPC (Cost Per Click) or CPA (Cost Per Action) models that require user engagement, CPM rewards publishers based purely on visibility and reach. This makes the model particularly effective for websites with high traffic volumes, and Nigeria is a populous country in a diverse and populous continent, boasting engaged audiences.

Being a mobile-first country, CPM ad formats are a natural fit in Nigeria. Over 90% of internet users access content through smartphones, and formats like native banners, mobile interstitials, and in-feed videos perform especially well. Another major benefit is revenue predictability. With CPM, publishers in Nigera can estimate earnings based on traffic projections, which is especially helpful for planning and growth.

While giants like AdSense once dominated the scene, a wave of new competitors now offer equally competitive and sometimes, even better CPM rates and publisher-friendly features. In this article, we explore some of the top CPM ad networks in Nigeria and how they benefit local publishers.
